BCC News No. 135

Entente Cordial

This month there is some real news! A number of our members visited Alençon, the French twinned town with Basingstoke for a couple of days in October to commemorate the 40th Anniversary of the twinning, and a report of the occasion can be found on page 2.

Thanks to Stuart and Bob for the article and photos.

For the last couple of years, near the beginning of the club season, I've written a short piece in the newsletter describing what the Photo Clinic is all about. I realise that many of you will know all about this already, so apologies to you. However, we are lucky enough to have a number of new members joining the club this year, so I think it's worth describing again a little of the background to the Photo Clinic and also what typically goes on at one of our sessions.

The Photo Clinic is open to all Basingstoke Camera Club members. It provides a way of showing your pictures, getting some feedback in a friendly and informal environment, and also of seeing in close-up the wide range of images that other club members are producing. There is always plenty of knowledgeable advice and guidance, and never a shortage of good-natured banter.

Of course, there are other ways to show, and seek feedback on, your images. For example, online photo blogs provide an increasingly common way for photographers to share their work. But although you may get comments from many different people, in my experience the sorts of comments that you receive are rarely constructive or helpful. In the club environment, the most common way to get feedback on our pictures is via competitions. This system works well, and we're lucky to have a great many judges who are willing to share their wealth of experience in commenting on our photographs. But the drawback here is that the feedback that we receive is, out of necessity, limited to the opinions and comments of one individual – which is not always ideal in a highly subjective area such as photography.

So what happens at our Photo Clinic evenings? Well, the format is pretty flexible, but typically each person brings two unmounted A4 size prints. Each print is displayed on a small easel for a minute or two, and then it is passed round the group to give everyone the chance to comment, if they wish. In my opinion, one of the great things about photography, and the reason why the Photo Clinic format works so well, is that no two people will view an image in exactly the same way. By getting a range of people's comments, you're quite likely to hear a variety of thoughts that may never have occurred to you – it

2009 Open Exhibition of Digital Images

By the time you read this preparations are well under way for the forthcoming Annual Open Exhibition.

As time has passed by our Exhibition has become well known in camera club circles throughout the country, and many entries each year come all over the UK.

With Steve working hard on the exhibition website we can look forward to on-line entry again this yer, which made it so easy to enter last year, and we have additional classes for 2009 too.

Everyone is welcome to the opening evening in February, but don't forget the deadline for entries is 15th January 2009.

Co-Op Calendar Success.

The provisional results for the selection of photographs for inclusion in the 2009 Co-Op members calendar have now been announced.

Following last years success by Peter Malcolm, this year we have three pictures in the 2009 calendar. The pictures are Oberwater in the New Forest by Wyn Voysey; Oakley pond and thatched cottage in snow by John O'Carroll and Autumn at Waggoners Wells by Dennis Clapp.

All clubs in the Southern CoOp area were invited to submit photographs taken in the area. Eleven clubs participated and the objective was to spread the honours around the clubs. Competition was tough with two clubs failing to have pictures selected, 7 clubs with one picture apiece, Boscombe Camera Club with two and Basingstoke Camera Club with three.

We had more pictures which I am sure would have been good candidates for selection, but the CoOp ignored all but the first three pictures from us to be fair to all clubs.

This is a great result for Basingstoke Camera Club, not least because we will receive a cheque for £300 (£100 per picture). The distribution of the prize money between club and photographers has not yet been decided but the club will benefit in some way. Any ideas on what we need as a club?

Dennis Clapp

BCC News and BCC E-News E-mail newsletter

The club has two publications to help keep members informed about the club. The BCC News, a paper newsletter, (this one!) is published at the beginning of each month during the season, and the e-mail BBC E-News which is published by email half way through each month.

If you are not receiving the e-mail newsletter but would like to please send an email to the newsletter editor at newseditor@basingstokecameraclub.co.uk. There is also a link on the home page of the website.

Both are, of course, all part of your subscription.

Basingstoke - Alencon 40th anniversary exchange.

10th – 12th October 2008

It's 08.30 on a Saturday morning. I sit, bleary eyed, sipping my coffee and stare. As the coffee clears the fog from my tired eyes, the town throws off its cloak of early morning mist and wakens to greet me. Watching the local people going about their daily routines – chatting, drinking coffee, greeting each other, I note that here, in Alencon, we greet each other with three kisses. I hear my name being called. My second coffee appears, and as I sit and watch the sun break through the mist and wait for my host to arrive I realise that I'm drinking French coffee, outside a small French café, in France. This is the life!

It all started last night at 20:30hrs. At Basingstoke we boarded the bus for this, the fortieth anniversary of the twinning of the two towns. (Basingstoke and Alencon). First established in 1968 through a government initiative to show solidarity to our allies in Normandy and help foster human contact and cultural links, part of the criteria for choosing a twin town was to choose a town of similar size and population. Back in 1968 Basingstoke matched with Alencon, both having a population of about 40 thousand. How things have changed!

Zaid and I had been teamed up and waited for our host to arrive. At the appointed hour we were introduced to Loic Jolivet, a tall elegant gentleman with an excellent grasp of English. We exchanged introductions and then Loic led us to his car. We left the town square and drove through the narrow cobbled streets of the old town and on to the outskirts where Loic lived in a gated community of four modern stylish houses with his wife Huguette. After unloading our bags, we chatted over a drink and exchanged stories about ourselves, and then we walked back into town to meet up with the rest of the group. As we strolled along the banks of the river Sarthe that flows through Alencon, we watched the last remnants of the morning mist dance on the river and felt the heat of the sun on our backs. It was going to be a hot day. We passed old boathouses and areas where women used to do their washing by the river, through narrow streets that opened into squares surrounded with modern buildings that blended perfectly with the old architecture.

Passing the Hollie au Bie, the old corn exchange, we went in to see how the interior had been modified to suit its purpose as an exhibition venue. The massive domed glass roof flooded the whole of the interior with light, bringing the cleaned stonewalls to life. Today it was hosting a book sale in aid of Amnesty International.

At the official welcome reception in the Hotel de Ville in the town square there were speeches from the Mayor of Alencon, Joaquim Pueyo, and the president of the twinning committee, Didier Bigot, welcoming us. The mayor of Basingstoke, Councillor George Hood, followed by drinks and snacks, returned thank you speeches. After the reception we walked back to our hosts home for lunch, and were treated to a specialty of Southern France: duck cooked in goose fat with sautéed potatoes and salad, all cooked fresh by our host. It was delicious!

After lunch we walked back into town to see more of the sights. The Eglise Notre-Dame, a magnificent 16th century church swathed in ornate architectural and intricately carved gargoyles, was our first stop. Having recently been completely restored and cleaned inside and out, the white stonework of the church was a perfect frame for the stained glass windows that shone like jewels in the afternoon sun. We spoke to the priest who was delighted that so many visitors were admiring his re-vamped church.

Snaking our way through a myriad of narrow streets we were treated to one photographic gem after another. It was pleasing to hear our host say that, although he knew most of the buildings of significance in Alencon, he was now looking at them with a different eye. Watching Zaid and I photograph, he was now seeing details he had not previously noticed. We arrived at the Halle Aux Toiles, where we were hosting our photographic display, to assist Bob with setting things up but were pleasantly surprised to discover that everything was complete and running. Well-done Bob! This building is also undergoing a complete facelift, inside and out. The exterior, made from the same stone as the church, glowed in the afternoon sun. The reception area with its mix of strong white stone columns, slate coloured stone floors, delicate white plastered arches, huge floating wooden doors and obscure windows was magnificent. The mix of old architecture, new materials and clever architectural design worked extremely well and suggested opulence with ecclesial foundations. The reception and the two main halls downstairs completed, work was still underway upstairs. We continued to stroll round the town and discovered a plethora of detail to photograph. Door and window catches, embossed pillars and wooden tiled roofs. Almost everything seemed to have some photogenic appeal. At 16:30 hrs we arrived at the La Maison D'oze to listen to the Overton Choral Society perform their second recital, preceded by James Mitchell.

After this, Loic took us to a local bar for a beer and to drink in the local atmosphere. We chatted with many of the locals sitting outside the bar who all seemed very interested in our visit. Later we strolled back to Loic's home, tired but still excited about the whole adventure.

We changed and readied ourselves for the evening official dinner back at the Halle aux Toiles. Chatting with Loic and Huguette and their family we helped celebrate their daughter's boyfriend's 21st Birthday with a bottle of Champagne, which made us feel part of the family before driving back into town. There was a delicious and beautiful buffet on display with some of the local drinks on offer. We chatted with our hosts and met the hosts of some of the others on the exchange. At the appointed time we were led into the second of the huge rooms to be greeted by a buffet of gargantuan proportions. The previous being only the starters! We ate and socialised, listened to the official speeches declaring unilateral friendship and solidarity, witnessed the exchange of official gifts and ate and drank some more. The evening drew to a close, we went home with our hosts and after a very long and hectic day we turned in for the night and looked forward to what tomorrow had in store for us.

Sunday again started with a bright sunny morning. I once again found myself drinking French coffee, in France. However, this time it was as a guest of a wonderful French family. We ate croissants and jammed bread with our coffee and observed that one of the local customs was to dip your jammed bread into your coffee before slurping down the moist sweetness. Rather messy, but great fun! After breakfast Loic drove us to the Parc Elan, to see a 'Ferne en Fete,' a farmers' fete and show with lots of local specialities for us to try. There were many animals on display being judged for 'best in show'. My first observation was that few of the large animals were penned in. Cows, bulls and horses could all be approached without the restrictions we have in the U.K. No barriers and fences to get in the way of the photography! (Health & safety was left to common sense, Vive va la France)! There was a tremendous display of fine young beasts and a most impressive display of 'Rocky Mountain Oysters', which brought a smile and a flush to the faces of some of the women. I'm happy to report that no comparisons were voiced out loud and dignity was left intact. After this excitement we drove to the Halle aux Toiles where lunch awaited.

On arrival Loic announced that, unfortunately, he could not join us for lunch as he had a prior engagement. We said our goodbyes to an excellent host and hope to meet him and his family again. Just prior to lunch we had the obligatory group photograph for the local press and some of the group who were not 'photographed out' snapped away their last few hours in Alencon. After lunch we boarded the bus and headed home. The sun was bright, affording us the views of the countryside we missed on our arrival because of the mist, and as we chatted it was obvious that everyone had had a most wonderful experience. On the ferry, energy levels dropped and only the dedicated made the effort to catch the sun setting over the sea. The rest of the homeward journey was uneventful and we all arrived at our destinations tired but exhilarated.

Do I think there is a value in the exchange? Yes I do. To receive the friendship of strangers, who welcome you into their home unconditionally, respect you for who you are and extend the hand of friendship to you based on events that happened over sixty years ago, has got to be experienced by many more people if we are to break through the cocooned society we live in today and remind ourselves that alliances are worth fighting for and maintaining.

certainly happens to me all the time, and as a result, I'm convinced that my photography continues to improve.

Our sessions take place on the second Monday of every month* at the Jolly Farmer in Cliddesden. And just to re-iterate, all members of the club are very welcome. We'll provide reminders closer to the date of our next get-together. In the meantime, if you'd like to know more about the Photo Clinic, please come and have a chat with me on any club evening, give me call on 01256 818515, or drop me an email at john@johnbuttre.com.

* Because of a booking clash at the Jolly Farmer, the November Photo Clinic was brought forward to 3rd November, so the next session is due to take place on Monday 8th December.
